New ConTex-Commentary - issued:		20.01.22
Numbers are going up - not only are the COVID-19 cases (still) on the rise again, also the New ConTex is again picking up momentum and is reaching levels we had already seen in early November 2021. Although we are still some 8% below the record high of almost exactly three months ago, it is not unlikely that, by this time next week, we're back in that region. Having today seen an overall increase of the New ConTex of 8.2% week-on-week, it is noteworthy that the 1700's are on par, for both short and long term, with the other sizes' gains being between 5.0% (6500 TEU) and 9.7% (3500 TEU, long term). Tonnage supply is short for the rest of the year and charterers will have to consider smaller tonnage than what they were originally looking for. We therefore probably do not get out on a limb by saying that we will not see any dramatic changes within the near future, albeit of Lunar New Year coming up shortly.
